Obama pledges help for West Philly neighborhood

Aid is coming. The president said Thursday the partnership with designated "promise zones" is not a "handout."

President Barack Obama announced on Thursday that help is on the way.

"In Philly, nearly four out of every 10 kids live below [the] poverty line," Obama said, "and a lot of them are on the west side of the city."

Philadelphia has been chosen as one of five "promise zones" — a designation that helps cities get better shots at federal grants to grow businesses, stop crime and educate their children. Tax incentives will also be offered for business expansions and job creations.

Obama said some plans for the area include help from local universities, such as Drexel, which has offered to connect middle and high school students with mentors to prepare them for college. And a supermarket is planned to "create jobs and provide healthy food where there's been too little of both."

"We're going to invest in that," Obama added.

San Antonio, Los Angeles, southeastern Kentucky and the Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma were the other areas chosen for federal tax incentives and grants to aid in tackling poverty.

Mayor Michael Nutter, who was at the White House, said in a statement that the selection is an important step for the Mantua neighborhood of West Philadelphia, which is "struggling with high poverty, high crime, high vacancy, low educational attainment and low employment rates."

Quoted

"These are neighborhoods where we will help local efforts to meet one national goal: that a child's course in life should be determined not by the zip code she's born in but by the strength of her work ethic and the scope of her dreams."

Obama

The promise zone

The Mantua neighborhood promise zone is home to more than 35,000 people.

- More than half of the residents in that area live in poverty and about 15 percent are unemployed.
- Philly's poverty rate — about 400,000 out of 1.5 million — is the highest of any major city.

Attack. Man robbed Delaware boy, 8, at knifepoint: Police

An 8-year-old Dover, Del., boy said a man tried to rob him at knifepoint Wednesday, police said.

Delaware State Police said the boy was walking through a housing development near the intersection of Scotch and Loblolly Pine drives just after 5 p.m. when he was approached by a man between the ages of 30 and 40 brandishing a knife.

Officials said the boy told his mother that the stranger approached him while he was walking home from a friend's house that afternoon and threatened to stab him if he did not give him all his money.

After the man demanded money from the boy, the child turned to run away. As the boy turned, the man lunged at him with the knife, police said.

The boy was able to elude the man and make it home safely.

Delaware State Police said the attacker is described as a black man, standing about 6 feet 2 inches and weighing between 150 and 180 pounds.

Anyone with information on the incident or suspect is asked to contact Delaware State Police at 302-697-2104. METRO

Charter school founder will be retried after jury deadlocks

Federal prosecutors decided to retry charter school founder Dorothy June Brown on fraud charges just minutes after a jury acquitted her of six charges and deadlocked on 54 others on Thursday.

"We will be retrying the case," said Patty Hartman, spokeswoman for the U.S. Attorney's Office.

Acquittal

Jurors found Brown not guilty of:

- Wire fraud related to Agora Cyber Charter.
- One count of wire fraud related to Laboratory.
- One count of witness intimidation.

Brown, who founded Ad Prima, Laboratory and Planet Abacus charter schools, is charged with embezzling $6.7 million from the schools by collecting separate six-figure salaries from all of her schools.

Prosecutors also say she filed false records of board meetings to cover up her fraud.

They returned from deliberations on Jan. 6. SAM NEWHOUSE

Study: 'Healthy' sit-down meals aren't so healthy

Full. One teaspoon of salt is enough for one day. Many sit-down chain restaurants are heavy-handed.

You'd think sit-down chain restaurants would offer healthier menu options than a typical drive-thru burger joint, right?

Well, a new Drexel University study compels consumers to think again.

Researchers investigated the nutritional values of chain sit-down's menu items, including the "healthy choice" options. And the results aren't good.

"Generally, a lot of consumers think food prepared away from home is probably not that great ... it's probably better at sit-down restaurants than fast-food," said Amy Auchincloss, leader of the study published in the Journal of Nutrition Education and Behavior.

Research has shown that not only is eating at these restaurants more expensive, it also showed the portions are larger and full of excess sodium and saturated fats.

Auchincloss, an assistant professor in the School of Public Health, said unfortunately Philly is no different than other big cities.

"The reality is," she said, "it's a growing part of what we eat everyday."

Facts

The study analyzed 2,516 menu items from 21 sit-down chains with data from March to May 2011.

- Large chains such as IHOP, Denny's, Applebee's and Chili's were included.
- Most adults only need to eat 2,000 calories daily.

Could eds and meds create 4,400 new jobs?

Seeing green. Higher local spending by schools and hospitals could mean millions for the city, says report.

A report released Thursday by the office of city controller Alan Butkovitz found that if local universities and hospitals would increase their local spending on manufacturing products by 25 percent, it could give a massive jolt to the economy, creating up to 4,400 jobs in Philadelphia.

But leaders of institutions identified in the report aren't jumping into action just yet.

"The first part of the theory, I think Mr. Butkovitz has spot on," said Ed Turzanski, vice president for government and community relations at LaSalle University. "And the second part is if we actually have the resources we need so we can go on a buying spree. People are very careful with their dollars."

Butkovitz said this report is just a "first step."

"We identified a $2 billion market that is not being exploited locally," Butkovitz said. "They're spending about $2 billion to purchase products that are manufactured elsewhere. They're doing a pretty good job of hiring locally. But on the manufacturing side, it's a pretty small number that they're buying."

Butkovitz's report found that cities such as Cleveland, Detroit and Baltimore have had success with similar strategies.

By the numbers

The value of a 25 percent increase on manufactured goods is $642 million.

- The estimated tax revenue is about $14 million.
- The amount currently spent on manufactured goods is $2 billion.

Puppies left for dead on icy morning

Two puppies were rescued after a man heard their cries coming from a backpack on a Lancaster street Wednesday, when temperatures were only 13 degrees.

The man found the puppies near his mailbox on South Duke Street, LancasterOnline.com reports. He took them to the Lancaster County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals shelter.

Both dogs — one male, one female — appear to be Chihuahua mixes between 8 and 12 weeks old.

"They were nearly frozen," Mike Diehm, rescue coordinator for the Lancaster County SPCA, told the website. "The dog on the bottom had ice on it."

Officials are investigating. METRO

NJ Gov. Christie apologizes, fires aide Bridget Kelly

New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie apologized to the residents of his state in a press conference Thursday after emails from one of his top aides were released, revealing she played a role in lane closures on the George Washington Bridge in an act of political retaliation.

Christie remained steadfast in his denial of any prior knowledge that top aide Bridget Kelly asked Port Authority executive David Wildstein in September to close lanes on the George Washington Bridge after the mayor of Fort Lee, N.J., didn't endorse Christie for re-election. The governor said he fired Kelly on Thursday morning because she lied to him when he asked his staff weeks ago whether they had any knowledge of involvement in the lane closures when the accusations began to surface.

"I am embarrassed and humiliated by the conduct of some of the people on my team," Christie said. "I believe all the people who were affected by this conduct deserve this apology and that's why I am giving it to them. I need to apologize to them for my failure as governor of this state to understand the true nature of this problem sooner than I did. I believe I have an understanding now."

The controversy began after the public release of several incriminating emails, including one that Kelly wrote to Wildstein in August, saying, "Time for some traffic problems in Fort Lee." The email came after Fort Lee's democratic mayor, Mark Sokolich, didn't endorse Christie in his bid for re-election.

Four days of lane closures in September on the George Washington Bridge, which connects Manhattan to Fort Lee, resulted in massive traffic jams and have been blamed for the slow response times of emergency vehicles and severe delays in buses carrying young students to their first day of school.

Oklahoma man charged with 'atomic wedgie' murder

Brad Lee Davis was charged with murder in the death of 58-year-old Denver St. Clair in a drunken family fight at a residence just east of Oklahoma City.

Police arrested Davis on Tuesday. The affidavit said he "grabbed St. Clair's underwear and gave him an 'atomic wedgie.' Davis allegedly pulled the elastic waistband of St. Clair's underwear over his head and around his neck." REUTERS

ME AND HER

TOM FOREMAN

FOREMAN IS A POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN.

CNN=POLITICS

I have one of those fancy Bluetooth things in my car that allows me to give my phone orders while I drive. Most of the time it works pretty well. But every few weeks I have a conversation that goes kind of like this. "Dial home," I say.

"Pardon?" the pleasant woman in the dash replies. "Dialing '0.' Is this correct?"

"No. Dial home."

"Dialing 000."

"No! Stop!"

"Nose pop? Dialing…"

"What the hell is nose pop, you dope?"

"Snow grope? Dialing…"

And it goes downhill from there. So while I absolutely love this new movie, "Her," about Joaquin Phoenix falling in love with a computerized voice, I put it more in the category of pure fiction rather than science fiction.

For starters, his character lives in a world that seems to have zero problems with software glitches, weak batteries or dropped signals. Never once does he bellow, "Wait! I can't hear you… I'm in an elevator!" When he is wooing his cyber love, he never has to enter the name of his favorite pet as a password.

Quoted

For starters, his character lives in a world that seems to have zero problems of software glitches, weak batteries, or dropped signals.

And on top of all that, the computerized voice with which he is smitten belongs to none other than Scarlett Johansson. Seriously, if a voice is going to be disembodied, it should not be that one. Just saying.

There are other small issues. In this not-so-distant future, for example, it seems like no one's pants quite fit, and LA looks about as exciting as an old folks' home.

For all of that, I really did adore this movie and completely buy the idea that we are developing "relationships" with our electronic devices. We even talk about them (and to them) as if they are junior high school crushes. "I'm in love with my new phone!" "Have you seen the Xbox One? It's beautiful." "Oh come on, baby, please don't crash!"

But love in the time of terabytes? I don't think we're quite ready for that yet. Mind you, I asked Siri how to spell terabytes. And she made the answer sound so sexy and snarky that it could have been my wife.

Senate majority supports Iran sanctions bill, Obama opposes

More than half of U.S. senators support a bill to impose new sanctions on Iran should the Islamic Republic break an agreement to curb its nuclear program, aides said on Thursday, but there was no plan yet to debate the measure.

The White House has threatened to veto the legislation, and Iran says last November's nuclear deal struck in Geneva would be dead if Congress imposes new sanctions.

It is uncertain whether the bill will be introduced on the Senate floor and whether backers can win the two-thirds majority to overcome a veto by President Barack Obama.

A senior Senate Democratic aide said there were no plans yet for advancing the bill to the Senate floor, despite the growing list of co-sponsors.

The bill would also place sanctions on Iran if it does not agree to a comprehensive deal later this year or next. The United States and five other world powers agreed to a six-month interim deal with Iran in Geneva in November that can be extended to a year.

Under last year's interim agreement, Iran will get access to billions of dollars' worth of funds that had been cut off by sanctions in return for limiting enrichment of uranium.

The Nuclear Weapon Free Iran Act is now supported by at least 54 senators in the 100-member chamber, according to a congressional record, with six senators joining on Wednesday. A Senate aide said two more joined on Thursday, bringing the total to 56.

Cuba, US meet on migration in latest sign of thawing ties

Trips. Cuba relaxed restrictions on travel, increasing the number of Cubans traveling to the U.S.

Cubans line up to request new passports in Havana on Jan. 14, 2013. / GETTY IMAGES

Officials from the United States and Cuba met in Havana on Thursday to discuss longstanding migration accords in the latest sign of a new collaborative spirit between the Cold War foes.

The migration talks are the highest public contact between the two governments, which do not have diplomatic relations, and recent meetings have been increasingly constructive, officials say.

The U.S. delegation was headed by Edward Alex Lee, acting deputy assistant secretary of state for Western Hemisphere affairs. There was no immediate confirmation from Cuba as to who led its delegation.

It was the second such meeting since July 2013. Under accords signed in 1994 and 1995, both governments pledged to promote safe, legal and orderly migration between Cuba and the United States, and to meet every six months to review the issue.

Over the past half century, thousands of Cubans have died trying to cross the treacherous Florida Straits on flimsy boats and homemade rafts.

Immigration officials reported 13,000 Cubans crossed the Mexican border and were accepted as residents in 2013, along with thousands more who visited the country and decided to stay.

The two governments have also held talks recently on resuming direct postal service, coordination in containing maritime disasters and regularly collaborating on drug trafficking interdiction. REUTERS

Security threat

Afghanistan to free most inmates seen by US as threat

Afghanistan has enough evidence to try only 16 of 88 prisoners that the United States considers a threat to security and plans to free the remaining detainees, the president's spokesman said on Thursday.

The move will further strain relations that are already near the breaking point over President Hamid Karzai's refusal to sign a security deal to shape the U.S. military presence after most foreign troops leave this year. Without a deal, Washington could pull most of its troops out after 2014. REUTERS

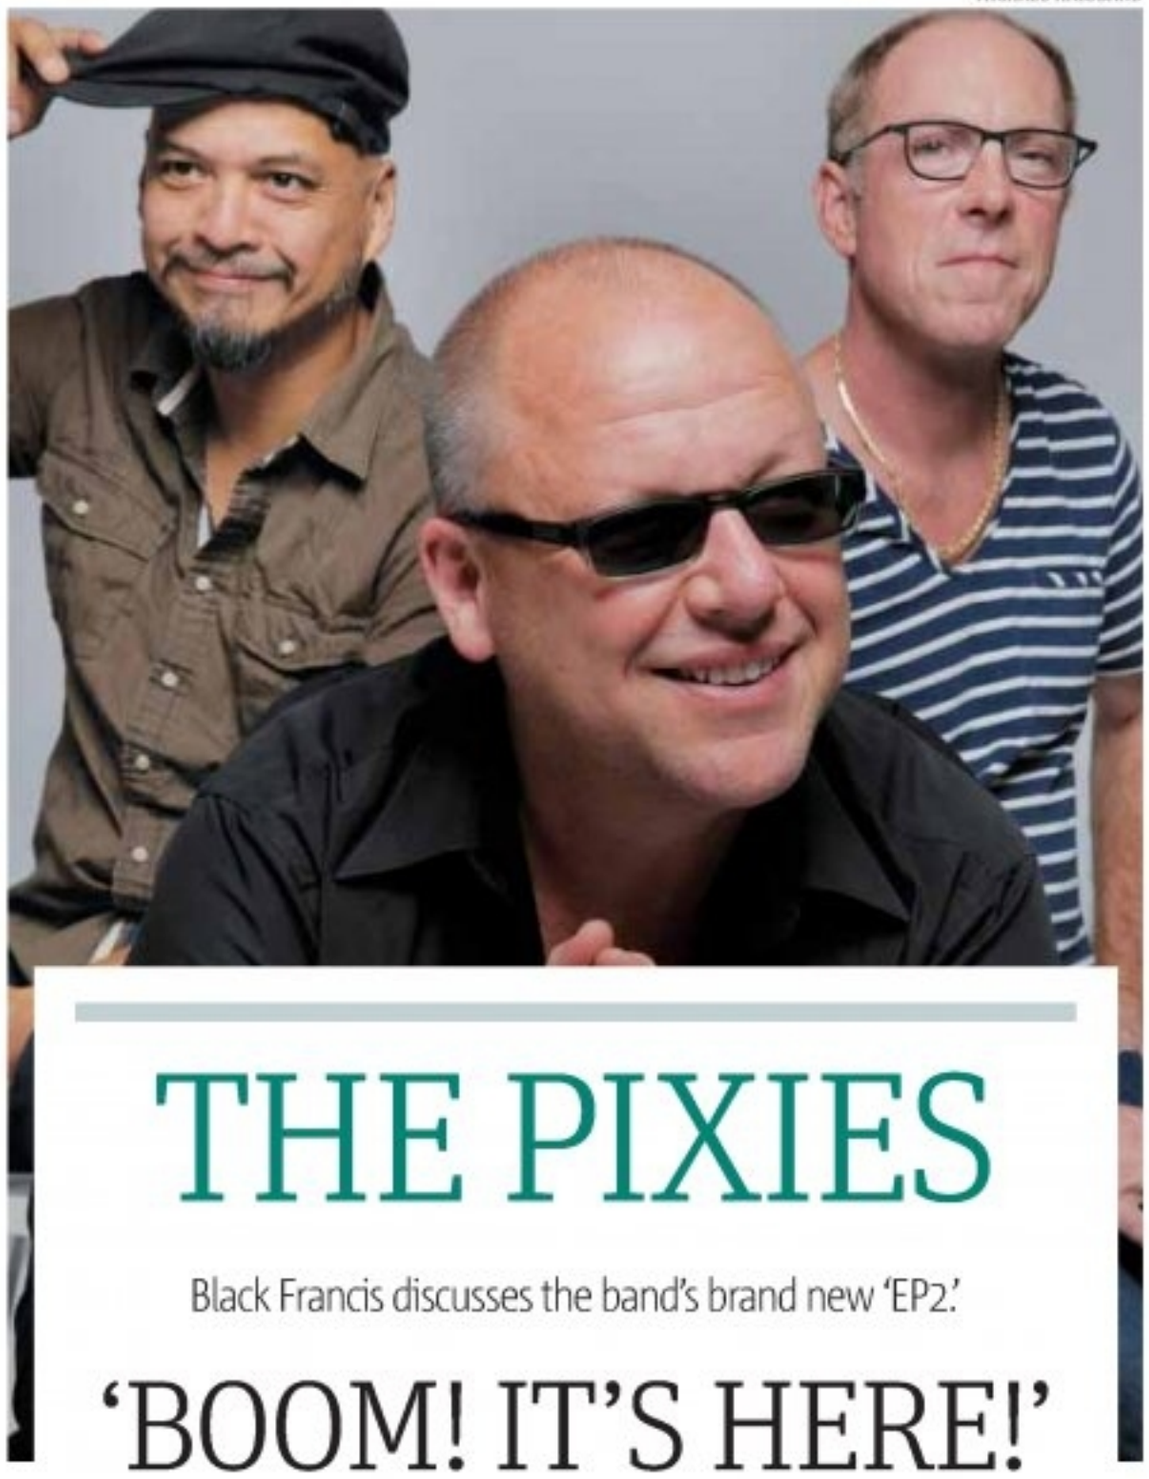
"That was the relationship with Kim Deal. She only wanted to commit to a couple of slices of bread, and we wanted to commit to a whole loaf."

Black Francis on the split with Kim Deal. Visit www.metro.us to read the full interview. The Pixies play the Electric Factory on Jan. 24.

MICHAEL HALSBAND



THE PIXIES

'BOOM! IT'S HERE!'

After not releasing any new music for more than 20 years, the Pixies dropped "EP1" in 2013 with very little fanfare. Last Friday at 3 a.m., the band did it again with "EP2," four rocking new songs from the same sessions that yielded "EP1," produced by Gil Norton.

Singer Black Francis says releasing music like this is the most logical way to do it in the ever-changing digital era, a time that has found the Pixies facing a lot of internal adjustments as well. He says the events of last year have functioned to "change our whole paradigm, basically."

Founding bassist Kim Deal quit the band earlier in 2013, and the remaining members sacked replacement Kim Shattuck this fall. The Pixies singer says he was shocked with how newsworthy the splits with both Kims were.

In conversation, the man who came to prominence for cryptic lyrics that went from whispers to shouts within seconds of each other can go from jovial to frustrated in just as little time. What sometimes reads as harsh is often tempered by a laugh, yet he seems quite steadfast in his opinions.

He says the split with Deal arose because after the band reunited for tours in 2003, she wasn't interested in making as much of a commitment as the other members.

"She only wanted to commit to a couple of slices of bread, and we wanted to commit to a whole loaf," he says. "We had all of this time booked (in the studio) and we had all of these songs written and demo-ed up and she was like, 'I only wanna do these songs.' And we were like, '[long sigh].' We've all got lives. We're all f—ing middle aged, and we don't really want to just dick around on three songs and have that be our big thing for the next six months. We're like, 'Look, we're here with the producer and we're in the same studio where they recorded "Bohemian Rhapsody," for Chrissakes! Let's f—ing make some music!'"

Throughout the conversation, Black Francis brings up topics before we even have a chance to ask. In discussing the popular legend that the Pixies initially broke up via fax, he turns to the matter of Kim Shattuck.

"I think in good time we would have said whatever it was that people thought we were supposed to say to address this 'issue,' this f—ing so-called issue of the current bass player leaving," he says, "but she instead ... went on her Facebook page and said, 'I'm very disappointed I'm not going to be working with the Pixies.' End of story, right? So now everybody on the Internet is the expert on everything and it's the problem with being in a rock band: Your fans are very precious about everything."

Q&A

Pitchfork stabbing

Let's talk about the big deal that was made out of the Pitchfork review of "EP1," which the website gave a score of 1.0.

I never read the review, but I'd heard about it because somebody said, "Oh, you got 1 out of 10!" Maybe they should go to a 100-star system and then they could have given us 1 out of 100! I don't know. What am I supposed to say? They gave me a bad review. I don't care. ... Thanks for giving me the publicity.

Wahlberg's 'Survivor' mentality

Mark Wahlberg points out that he's 42 years old. But that didn't stop him from playing a soldier in "Lone Survivor" — one who, along with his three fellow SEALs (Taylor Kitsch, Ben Foster and Emile Hirsch), is put through the wringer, gets shot at repeatedly by Taliban insurgents and falls relentlessly down hills. Wahlberg plays Marcus Luttrell, the only survivor of the mission, who wrote about the experience in a book by the same title.

On playing a real person: "For me, I was fortunate to meet the guy I was playing — spending time with him, having him throughout the entire process and helping me with anything I needed. He's a very special individual. To see the kind of man he is — I'm certainly inspired to be a better man."

On working with a relatively small budget: "Originally this was going to be a big-budget movie. But we did this movie for a small price, which is why it feels so intimate and real and authentic."

On the technical constraints of shooting quickly: "We had a short amount of time [to do it]. We had two units going at the same time. If you were with the second unit, you'd be doing a lot of action stuff, with the falls or certain parts of the gun battle. Then I'd run back to the village set. We were always all over the place."

On getting into the soldier mentality: "As a man, I don't want to sit on the bench. I want to be in the game. I always want the ball. It's not a question of physical ability. It really comes down to a mental toughness that sets those guys apart and gets them through the training."

On how he approached his role: "When [writer/director Peter Berg] first asked me to do it, I thought selfishly, as an actor, 'Wow, what a great opportunity to play a showy part.' And then when I read it and saw what it entailed, my perspective changed. Then it was never about me again. It was about the guy I was portraying."

On war: "I don't like war, but I love soldiers. And they're not the guys who decide whether or not they're going in. They don't really care. They have a job to do and they do it. They risk their lives — that's what they do. That's why we made this tribute to all of them."

Based on a true story

Hitting the shelves

"I don't read the books before I make the movies. I've been in situations many times where you've adapted a piece of material and you always feel like something's been left out. I thought [Berg] did a great job of writing the screenplay. I was completely immersed in the world and felt it. I didn't want to then go back and read the book and start complaining about why this wasn't in there or why that isn't there. You could debate that for hours. I read the book after — and I did feel like, 'Why isn't this there?'"

Family matters

Julianne Nicholson, Meryl Streep and Margo Martindale share a rare civil moment in "August: Osage County." / THE WEINSTEIN COMPANY

Because of their awards, the plays of Tracy Letts have the veneer of respectability. But what they really do is straddle a line between technique and trash. "August: Osage County" won the Pulitzer Prize, but it's not much classier than redneck extravaganza "Killer Joe."

The film doesn't end, as "Joe" did, with an extended bout of chicken drumstick fellatio, but does feature its own barnstorming dinner scene, helmed by TV vet John Wells ("ER," "The Company Men"), a nice guy in over his head. Meryl Streep, a loathsome matriarch, is Wells' biggest problem. Her husband (Sam Shepard) kills himself early on, forcing the whole dysfunctional family to gather. Meryl is a brilliant actress, but she requires boundaries. Give her guidelines, and she'll churn out a cucumber cool monster boss in "The Devil Wears Prada." Give her a drug addict pouncing on her family at a disastrous dinner, and you get her bulging her eyes, singing through a Southern accent and flailing about like a liquored-up performance artist.

Julia Roberts, as Streep's eldest daughter, also succumbs to overacting, but the rest of the cast try their best to keep things grounded.

Love and sex on the big screen

Sex, the film curator Amos Vogel wrote sarcastically in the 1970s, is "the most dangerous image known to man. Though it portrays the most universal, most fundamental, most desired human act, it mustn't be shown." Not much has changed, even as mores have loosened and obscenity laws have dropped. In fact, in some ways society has backslid.

"I noticed there was this strange resurgence of really extreme radical right wing attacks on things like Planned Parenthood and birth control," says Jesse Pires, head curator of "Free to Love," an ambitious series of films about sex that runs through mid-February at International House. "There was this phrase, 'the War on Women,' that was suddenly being bandied about. It reminded me of this era 40 to 50 years ago. I thought a lot of those arguments had been settled."

The series seeks to reopen those discussions by looking at the fertile period of cinema during the sexual revolution of the 1960s and 1970s. The Production Code, which kept Hollywood clean since 1934, had died. Along with profanity and realistic violence, sex had entered movies and the mainstream. Regular moviegoers were seeing underground cinema.

"It's crazy to think there was a time when Time magazine was writing about 'I Am Curious (Yellow)' and other controversial sex films," Pires says, referring to the Swedish quasi-documentary that became a hit thanks to its realistic depiction of

A lighter side of...

On the less extreme side, there's "Bob & Ted & Carol & Alice" (Jan. 25), which Pires describes as "Hollywood's sanitized version of the sexual revolution." Also in the mix are comic portrayals of sex, like "Barbarella" (Feb. 1) and Woody Allen's "Everything You Always Wanted to Know About Sex (But Were Afraid to Ask)" (Feb. 14), featuring giant, rampaging mammaries and Gene Wilder in love with a sheep.

That film — and its companion piece, "I Am Curious (Blue)," released the subsequent year — bookend the I-House series. In between, it seeks to be broad and representative. Those who remember a time when suburban couples flocked to X-rated films can see "Deep Throat" (Jan. 11) or Radley Metzger's softcore "Score" (Jan. 24). The latter not only features the customary girl-on-girl pairing, but guy-on-guy — this at a time when homosexuality was considered a mental deficiency.

Along with obscure titles, the series includes major milestones like "Flaming Creatures" (Jan. 16), Jack Smith's avant-garde legend that was once banned and whose screenings were raided.

Apart from acting as a portal to a more freewheeling time, "Free to Love" is meant to reflect on our own era. "There's this notion about having a healthy attitude towards sex and embracing diverse sexual practices — this belief that sex can contribute to a better society," Pires explains. "There was this feeling that people were looking at the times — race riots, the Vietnam War — and saying, 'We need to imagine a more utopian vision for our society.' There comes this Freudian idea that if you're suppressing sexual desires, that will come out in really dark and destructive ways."

ART STREIBER, NBC

AWARD SHOW

'The 71st Annual Golden Globes'

We are tuning in to this exclusively because our favorite lady buddy comedy duo Amy Poehler and Tina Fey are once again hosting. They can do no wrong. Also, we're tuning in because we'll be live tweeting the whole, boozy shebang (the Globes are much more fun than the Oscars), wine in hand.

SUNDAY, 8 P.M., NBC

COMEDY

'Girls'

Lena Dunham and pals are back to wank about upper middle class white girl problems — and we love every minute of it. In the season 3 premiere, Hannah tries to get her OCD (a last-minute plotline we frankly did not care for) under control while balancing work and living with Adam, and we find out what the hell happened to Jessa.

COMPETITION

'10 Million Dollar Bigfoot Bounty'

Onetime television Superman/longtime Lifetime original movie star Dean Cain hosts this competition to find Bigfoot/Sasquatch/whatever-your-geographical-region-calls-the-giant-man-ape, for which the prize is a cool $10 million. Um, come again?

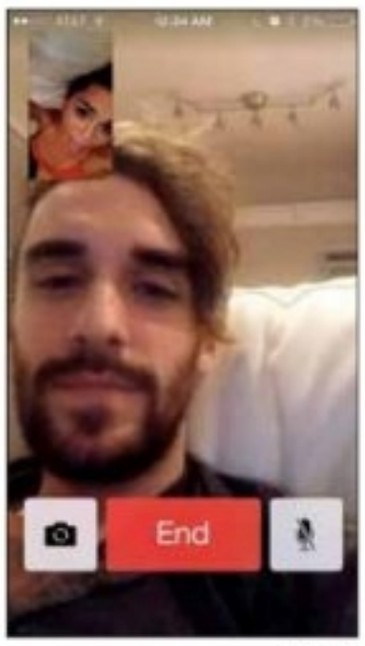
Is Miley Cyrus lusting after the help?



TWITTER

Miley's assistant, Cheyne Thomas, has seen her in a bra. And she wants the world to know it. She posted the above screenshot of their video chat to her Twitter account last night.

So is Miley dating Cheyne? He certainly has the perfect name for a Miley Cyrus boyfriend. And according to Hollywood Life, Miley was spotted grinding very aggressively on her employee in Vegas on Dec. 27.

We'd better not get our hopes up for an upstairs-downstairs romance, though. After all, seeing Miley in a bra is something Cheyne shares with everyone with an Internet connection. It's probably in the contract for anyone on Miley's staff: "Duties include filing, running errands, being twerked upon." MELINDA TAUB

Drew Barrymore's belly laughs

A pregnant Drew Barrymore shared a hearty belly-laugh backstage with Ellen DeGeneres at Wednesday's "People's Choice Awards." What was it that made Barrymore laugh so hard? "Ellen DeGeneres told me I was fat!" she told the audience when she got onstage.

Kelly Osbourne ends engagement

Looks like Matthew Mosshart won't have Ozzy Osbourne as a father-in-law. Should he feel happy? Sad? Relieved? Not sure what my emotions would be with this one.

The daughter of the Prince of Darkness announced that she's split from Mosshart just months after announcing their engagement.

"Kelly Osbourne and Matthew Mosshart have decided to end their engagement," her rep tells People magazine. "The split is amicable and the pair continue to have nothing but the utmost respect for one another. Kelly is looking forward to a new year full of fresh beginnings. No further comment will be provided."

Bad economics

Re: 'Who needs enemies when you have the government?' (Metro, Jan. 2) I totally agree with letter writer Janice Amato's assertion that "it's not al Qaeda that is killing America... [it's] our own (very dishonest) government." It does this by, above all, taking away our freedoms and liberties. What's not readily realized is how the government, especially politicians and bureaucrats, takes away our ECONOMIC freedoms. Three immediate examples:

One: Obamacare will force people to buy government-approved health "insurance" even if they don't want or need it.

Two: The minimum wage law takes away our freedom to work for whomever we want or hire whomever we want, at whatever wage TWO ADULTS agree to.

Three: The proposed extension for unemployment benefits will force workers to pay for these benefits and take away their freedom to spend their hard-earned money in the way they want.

And that's just three examples. With its innumerable regulations on the economy, confiscatory taxes and uncontrolled spending, the government wages a virtual war on our economic freedoms.

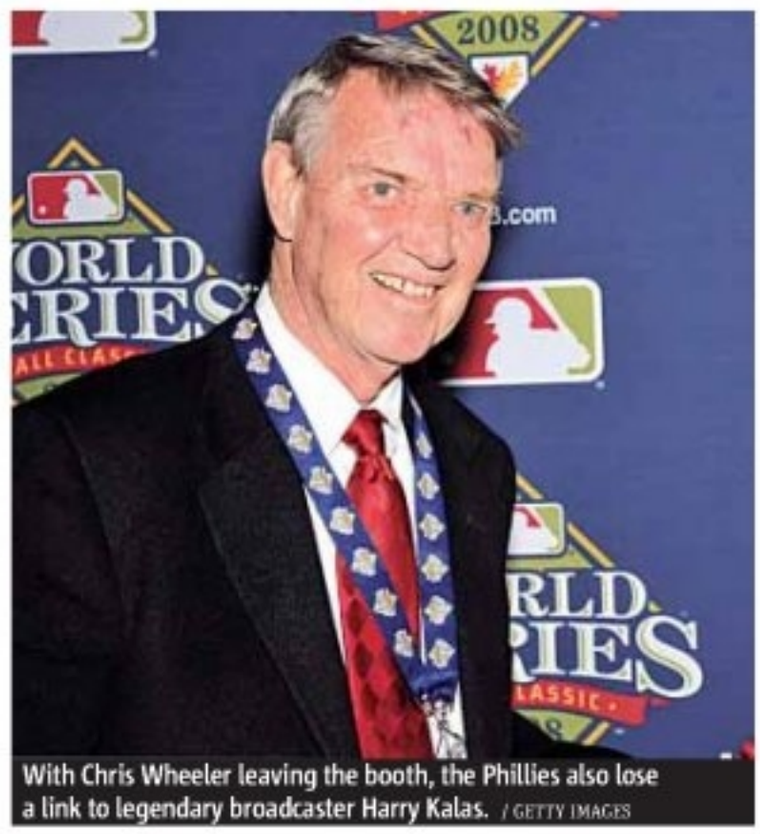
Jackson OK with contract

Receiver says he is happy with deal

After previously saying publicly he deserves more money, DeSean Jackson admitted he is pleased with his current contract, one that will pay him $10.5 million next year. A new contract before the offseason is unlikely.

Broadcasters leave a legacy

MLB. The departure of Wheeler and Matthews creates a void for Phillies fans.



With Chris Wheeler leaving the booth, the Phillies also lose a link to legendary broadcaster Harry Kalas. / GETTY IMAGES

Who says the Phillies are immune to making big changes in 2014? Longtime Phillie play-by-play man Chris Wheeler and color analyst Gary 'Sarge' Matthews were booted from the booth.

Wheeler had been a Phillies broadcaster since 1971.

"Back when I played with the Phillies (1996-98), I spent some time with Wheels and he was a great guy," Kansas City Royals radio broadcaster Rex Hudler said. "He's a class act and a heck of a guy behind the microphone. I enjoyed my time there. Harry [Kalas] was obviously there at the time and as a baseball broadcaster, I look at him as the standard. It had to be a joy for Wheels to be in the booth with Harry. But Harry's gone."

And so is Wheeler. Wheeler and Matthews will remain in the organization in some capacity.

It'll be interesting to see who the Phillies add to the booth. Former closer Brad Lidge balked at the chance to return to the Phillies fold at this time. Ricky Bottalico, who was also a Phillies closer and ex backup catcher Chris Coste are bandied about as possible replacements.

"It's not as easy as it looks," Hudler said. "You just don't step in off the street and do the job. You have to put in the time but I love it."

How significant is the role of a baseball broadcaster in Philly?

"I think it's big," WXPN general manager Roger LeMay said. "Ironically the broadcasters here have had more continuity than the players over the years. They are the conduit between the fans and the team. They're the trusted source that brings it all together. This [hire] will be significant."

Apparently Comcast has considerable input regarding, who is in the Phillies broadcast booth. Can Comcast also have an impact on other facets of the Phillies organization?

"I don't think so," an NL executive said. "But it's a good idea to have the best person doing a particular job in your organization. Loyalty in baseball doesn't usually translate to winning."

The Phillies have decided to invite Jesse Biddle and Maikel Franco to spring training, along with Sebastian Valle, Mario Hollands and Ken Giles.

"If Franco has a monster spring training and [Cody Asche] has trouble, why not," a National League scout said.

PSU football has its man

Franklin to accept PSU offer: Report

One of the most prestigious coaching openings in the country could be filled this weekend, as several sources have confirmed Vanderbilt head coach James Franklin will take over in the same capacity in Happy Valley with the Nittany Lions.

Franklin is young, just 41, and an up-and-coming Division I coach after he tallied 24 wins in three seasons with the Commadores. His leadership has netted three bowl appearances for the school and back-to-back postseason wins.

Nothing is written in stone, however, as Vanderbilt's athletic director told the Associated Press that Franklin remains the coach at Vanderbilt.

James Franklin / GETTY IMAGES

Franklin would be replacing Bill O'Brien, who left PSU for the Texans.

Peyton Manning set a single season passing yards record this season and will face the Chargers on Sunday. / GETTY IMAGES

Manning, Brady begin playoff treks

NFL. The division playoffs pit young teams and battle-tested powers.

The NFL playoff season continues to heat up as several up-and-coming squads try to unseat perennial powerhouses on an enormous stage all across the country. Former Super Bowl champion New Orleans will travel to Seattle, looking to start a new era in the NFC, while the 49ers look to return to the promised land by beating Cam Newton and the Panthers.

In the AFC, Peyton Manning leads the NFL's best offense against the surprise of the postseason, San Diego and Tom Brady looks to do it to the Colts again, this time against second-year quarterback Andrew Luck.

Saints at Seahawks
(Saturday, 4:25 p.m., FOX)
The Seahawks have won 16 of their last 17 home games and six straight home playoff games at CenturyLink Field in Seattle, but the Saints have proven they can win on the road after hanging on against the Eagles 26-24 last Saturday.

Colts at Patriots
(Saturday, 8:15 p.m., CBS)
This is a familiar playoff matchup for both teams, but the Colts have a different look and feel with Luck taking over for Manning as field general in Indy. Will this game have the same luster as Manning vs. Tom Brady matchups of the past? We'll have to watch and see.

49ers at Panthers
(Sunday, 1:05 p.m., FOX)
Two extremely talented mobile quarterbacks highlight this NFC battle. Can Colin Kaepernick recapture his brilliance from last postseason or will Cam Newton prove he's an elite quarterback?

Chargers at Broncos
(Sunday, 4:40 p.m., FOX)
The Chargers are a surprise playoff team. The Broncos are as far from a surprise as you can get. Manning set several records this season. The San Diego defense better watch out.

Flyers on fire on home ice

NHL. The Flyers' 10-game home win streak could just be the start for team.

If you haven't already, it's time to start paying attention to the Flyers.

After a 3-1 win over Montreal back on Wednesday gave the team its 10th consecutive win at home, the Flyers (23-17-4) are playing perhaps the best hockey in the entire NHL.

The offense and defense are each firing all cylinders as the team has outscored opponents 39-17 in the 10 game upswing, halfway to a franchise record for wins at home in a row.

"Earlier in the year, we were finding ways to lose games," Flyers forward Sean Couturier said in an interview, "and now we're finding ways to win games."

Overall, the Flyers are 8-2 in their last 10, many of those wins coming on a 5-1 road trip in the Western Conference, good enough to put the Flyers in second place in the Metropolitan Division behind the red-hot Penguins.

"We're not always going to play our best hockey," Flyers head coach Craig Berube told reporters, "but we're squeezing wins out."

The Flyers have proven they can be road warriors and with more home games than any other team in the NHL ahead of them on the schedule, the Bullies have a distinct advantage as the second half of the season arrives.
